Richard Warren

compiled by Hubert Kinney Shaw

Published by Mass. Society of Mayflower Descendants

Charles Edward Banks in "Ancestry and Holmes [sic] of the Pilgrim Fathers" (Grafton Press, N.Y. 1929, pp 92-3) writes: "Richard Warren came from London and was called a merchant of that city (by Mourt.). Extensive research in every available source of information—registers; chancery, and probate, in the London courts, proved fruitless in an attempt to identify him. As he died in 1628, it is probable that he was considerably past middle life at the date of emigration.

Richard Warren was not of the Leyden Company, but joined the Pilgrims from London. He came alone on the Mayflower and was one of the nineteen signers of the Compact who survived the first winter. Under the land division of 1623, his apportionment, as one of the Mayflower passengers, fell in the north side of the town, and under those who came in the "Ann," his wife and daughters having come on that ship, his lands were "on the other side of the towne [sic] toward Eele [sic] River," where he made his home in the section later known as Wellingsley or Hobshale, and where he died in 1628. He also owned land along the shore of the present Warren's Cove.

The date and place of his birth is unknown. He died in Plymouth in 1628. He married in England before [sic] 1610, Elizabeth _____ b abt 1583; d. 22 Oct. 1673 at Plymouth "aged above 90 yrs." In the early Plymouth Colony records she was usually spoken of as "Mistress" Elizabeth Warren, an uncommon designation, and she was one of the few widows of the Colony who did not remarry.

Richard Warren

Richard Warren was the first of that name in America. He was of Greenwich, County Kent of England. Not much is known of his ancestry. ‘Richard Warren’s parents are not known. All that is known is that he came from London and was called a merchant’ of that city (Mors). Registers, Chancery, and Probate in London Courts prove fruitless in an attempt to identify him. As he died by 1628, Plymouth, Mass., it is probable he was considerable past middle life at the date of his emigration to America. The date and place of his birth is unknown. He came alone on the Mayflower. His family followed on The [sic] ‘Ann’ in 1623. He was married in England before 1610 to Elizabeth _____. Some authorities give her maiden name as unknown; others as March being a widow, her maiden name being Juat or Pratt. She was born abo t [sic] 1583; died in Plymouth, the 22nd of Oct., 1673, aged 90 years. Believed that Elizabeth Warren was his 2nd wife. It is thought the daughters were by his first wife. (5) Two sons were born in New England. -7 children. He received land grants.

SECOND GENERATION OF THE WARREN FAMILY IN AMERICA

Mary Warren, daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Warren, married Robert Bartlett [sic], a Pilgrim to the Plymouth Colony, Mass. in 1623 – accompanied him on The [sic] 'Ann'. He was one of the first purchasers of Dartmouth and died in 1676, age 73. His wifow [sic] survived him by a few years. They were the parents of 8 children, 2 sons and 6 daus. After Robert's death, Mary married Thos. Delano. Robert Bartlett's descendants are in Freetown to this day.

It is generally conceded that the Bartletts coming to this country previous to 1700, are members of the Bartlett Family of Stopham, Sussex County, England or its branches. The eldest linve [sic] have lived ther [sic] since the Norman Conquest.

Robert Bartlett was a cooper by occupation.; served as a member of the Grand Jury; also on Trial Juries; several times as surveyor of highways. Was a 'freeman'. Burial place not recorded but believed by son Joseph's side on Burial Hill.

THIRD GENERATION

Mary Bartlett, dau. of Robt. and Mary (Warren) Bartlett, died 9-26-1692; married twice: (1) Richard Foster; (2) 7-8-1659 Jonathan Morey (our direct ancestor) who died 5-19-1709, Plymouth, Mass.

Jonathan Morey was son oo [sic] Roger (1601) and Mary (Johnson) Morwy [sic] who was our first ancestor of the Morey Family to America. Roger Morey seems to have been a close follower of Roger Williams. Possible that he set sail from England in the same ship, The [sic] 'Lion' which left Bristol Dec. 1, 1630. He took the freeman's Oath on May 8, 1631. Roger's wife was Mary, dau. of John and Margery Johnson. John Johnson was late of Roxbury, in Suffolk in the Mass. Colony. Roger Morey went to Salem, Mass. Accumulated land which he sold in 1643 and moved to Providence, R. I. 1655, he was appointed by to keep a house of entertainment. Was a commissi oner [sic] and a juryman.

“May 6, 1669, Roger's widow Mary applied for administration of his estate, he having made a will and left her executrix.”

THE 1623 DIVISION

In 1623 it was decided to allot land to every family to help increase production. The previous plan of working for the common good was not successful and this new plan worked much better.<sup>2</sup> The article might be considered a “reconstructed” 1623 census of Plymouth, as everyone living there at the time appears to have been granted land, except the crew of the Little James. They were hired for fishing and did not intend to stay.

I believe the division was actually made after January 1st, 1624. It was certainly made after the Bradford-Southworth marriage 24 Aug. 1623 (old style) and the marriage of Myles Standish and Barbara who came on the Anne. It was apparently made after 5 Nov. 1623, as Timothy Hatherly did not receive land. He had come on the Anne, but returned on the same ship after his house burned November 5th. Some have thought that the division was made late in 1623 (old style) what we would term March 1624, just before April planting.

It appears that the population of Plymouth in 1623 included 48 from the Mayflower, 32 from the Fortune, and about 96 from the Anne, Little James and other ships, at total population of about 176. Mayflower passengers who survived the first winter, but apparently left Plymouth before the 1623 division, were Desire Minter, William Trevor and Ely. It is possible that they might be “hidden” in one of the families, but I doubt it.

The list of Mayflower passengers is taken from Bradford’s history. There are no contemporary passenger lists for the Fortune, Anne and Little James whose passengers shared in the 1623 land division. Published lists are based on the names in that division, with the 1627 cattle division as the primary source for identifying wives and children.

The Fortune brought Robert Cushman and 35 other passengers in 1621, of whom 32 were still living at Plymouth in 1623. Mr. Cushman returned on the Anne, Mr. Ford had died by that time, and two whose names are unknown had either died or left the colony. The Anne and Little James brought “about 60 persons for the general” and a company that came “on their particular” — John Oldham’s group who were not regular members of the Colony.

I believe that the following rules were used in 1623 for allotting land.

1—An acre for every person then living in Plymouth except the sailors. This would include children born on the ships. Oceanus Hopkins and Peregrine White were born aboard the Mayflower, the Fords had a baby shortly after the Fortune arrived, and Sarah Jenney and Ephraim Morton were probably born on the Anne.

2—An acre for every adult who came on the Mayflower, whether he died aboard or in Plymouth, as long as any of his family survived. No shares for children who died.

3—An acre for every servant who died, provided one member of the family survived.

4—An acre for every person who contributed £10 toward the financing of the Pilgrims—the “double share” of the Pilgrims’ agreement with the Adventurers.

<sup>2</sup>In 1624 the settlers asked their Governor to cease distributing land “by yearly lot” so that they might benefit from the improvements they had made on a particular piece of land. He therefore assigned them the use of the same lots until 1627, when the agreement with the Adventurers would expire. There was still “no division for inheritance.”

✓Richard Warren—[2]—one for himself and an extra share for financial contribution?

John Goodman—x—as he died the first winter, this share must be for money contributed.

John Crackstone—x—a share for John, Jr. and one for his father, dead.

Another mystery. There should be a 6th share for his daughter Abigail Warren. The extra share he received as a Mayflower passenger should not be for his wife who came later as this was contrary to what others received.

Edward Bangs was 86 years old in 1677, so he would be 32 years old in 1623. As no first name is used, I believe there must have been more than one adult male. Perhaps Edward brought a wife and child and a brother with him. Only Edward was in Plymouth in 1627, according to the cattle division. He married Lydia Hicks after that date.

The Mayflower Compact

NE of the forerunners of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of this nation is the Mayflower Compact. This agreement was the first foundation of the government of the Plymouth colony . . . and one of the earliest documents in the American quest for freedom which culminated in the United States of America a century-and-a-half later.

The Compact was written and signed aboard the Mayflower on November 21, 1620, (reckoned by our present calendar) as the famous ship lay at anchor in Cape Cod Harbor off the future site of Provincetown, Massachusetts. No one knows what became of the original document itself. However, its content is recorded in the History of Plymouth Plantation, written by the second governor of the colony, William Bradford, in his own handwriting. It was, to quote Governor Bradford's history, "occasioned partly by the discontented and mutinous speeches that some of the strangers amongst them had let fall from them in the ship—That when they came ashore they would use their won liberty, for none had power to command them, the patent they had being for Virginia, and not for New England which belonged to another government, with which the Virginia Company had nothing to do. And partly that such an act by them done (this their condition considered) might be as firm as any patent, and in some respects more sure."

We of the Aero Mayflower Transit Company, Inc., realizing that the Compact is relatively little known, yet so significant a part of our heritage of freedom, felt that you might be interested in the actual text of this document. We have, therefore, through the courtesy of the Massachusetts State Library where the original manuscript is preserved, reproduced inside this folder, a facsimile of the Compact as it appears in the handwriting of Governor Bradford, one of its signers, in his History of Plymouth Plantation. It is undoubtedly the oldest known record of this text. In addition, we have reproduced, in pleasing form, we hope, the text in typeset form for easier reading, together with a list of the signers. Either is suitable for framing separately, or both may be framed together, should you wish to do so.

In sending you this document, on the 335th anniversary of its adoption, we hope it will bring interest and pleasure, and, as it did to us, a greater measure of appreciation and gratitude to our pioneering forefathers.

PSALM 86

Bow down Thine ear, Jehovah, answer me:
For I am poor, afflicted, and needy.
Keep thou my soul, for merciful am I;
My God, Thy servant save, that trusts in Thee

In day of my straight tribulation
I call on Thee; for Thou wilt answer me.
Among the gods, not say is like Thee
O Lord, and like unto Thy works are none.

Unto Thy servant give Thy strength, and save
Thine handmaid's son. A sign for good show me;
And let mine haters see and shamed be
That I from Thee, Lord, help, and comfort have.

PSALM 100

Shout to Jehovah, all the earth;
Serve ye Jehovah with gladness,
Before Him come with singing mirth,
Know that Jehovah He God is.

It's He that made us, and not we,
His folk, and sheep of His feeding.
Oh, with confession enter ye
His gates, His courtyards with praising.

Confess to Him, Bless ye His name,
Because Jehovah He good is;
His mercy ever is the same,
And his faith unto all ages.

PSALM 136

Confess Jehovah thankfully,
For He is good, for His mercy
Continueth for ever.

To God of gods confess do ye,
Because His bountiful mercy
Continueth for ever.

Unto the Lord of lords confess,
Because His merciful kindness
Continueth for ever.

To Him that doth Himself only Things wondrous great, for His mercy
Continueth for ever.

Pilgrim Progress

The PILGRIM PROGRESS, instituted by the Town of Plymouth in 1921 in honor of it Pilgrim founders, takes place every Friday in August at 5 o'clock, and also forms part of the Town's celebration of Thanksgiving Day.

Each marcher represents one of the PILGRIMS, man, woman, or child, who survived the rigors of the first winter. A list of the Pilgrim households, of the members who died and of those who survived, is given by Governor Bradford in his "History of Plymouth Plantation". This list is carefully followed. The Pilgrims assemble at beat of drum, and march to meeting under arms, as described by Isaac de Rasieres, Secretary of the Dutch colony of New Netherlands, who visited Plymouth in 1627. The line of march leads up the first street (Leyden St.) to the site of the Fort on Burial Hill, where the Pilgrims met for worship. The Psalms sung are taken from THE BOOK OF PSALMS, translated by Henry Ainsworth, which was used by the Pilgrims in Holland and in Plymouth. The passages read by Elder Brewster are usually from Governor Bradford's "History", or other Pilgrim sources.

Thus is faithfully re-lived the Sabbath procession of the Pilgrims to worship.

THE BEST FROM AMERICAN HERITAGE

Why Pilgrim Fathers Failed Where Puritans Succeeded

TWO BANDS OF SETTLERS: A STUDY IN CONTRASTS

A span of 10 short years separated the establishment of the Plymouth Rock colony by the Pilgrims and of the Massachusetts Bay colony by the Puritans. But the two groups of early settlers in New England were vastly different.

The little band of Pilgrims nearly met failure. In an area abounding with game and fish and berries, the settlers almost died of famine—and would have, if the Indians had not offered help.

Conversely, the Puritans thrived. Backed by a well organized corporation, they were marked for success almost from the beginning. They streamed across the Massachusetts hills, into New Hampshire, Maine, and the verdant Connecticut valley, settling whole communities at a time.

What made the difference? Why did one colony nearly perish, the other thrive? At Thanksgiving time, an associate editor of American Heritage takes a look at these early beginnings of the country and makes a pilgrimage to the home of the first Thanksgiving.

BY RICHARD M. KETCHUM

THERE are few surviving landmarks of those first grim years when famine and death watched the Pilgrims with pale, expectant eyes. Not until survival was relatively certain did they, or the Puritans who followed them, have time to construct anything comfortable or permanent.

The Pilgrims' first "common house," begun on Christmas day, 1620, and completed on Jan. 8, was burned five days later, with its thatched roof destroyed. Although an icy downpour continued through that day, no one made an effort to repair it. The reason: It was the Sabbath.

Early Graves Hidden

Their piety cost the Pilgrims dear in the resulting epidemic of pneumonia and influenza. Few were left to greet their first New England spring. A monument on the steep slope of Cole's hill is all that marks the first burying ground, where survivors of the terrible winter leveled the earth over the remains of their companions. "Just the Indians should know how many were the graves."

For nearly three years the Pilgrims fought off starvation. In November of 1621 the ship Fortune arrived with 35 new colonists but no supplies. In 1623 the same story was repeated. But with or without supplies from England, it is puzzling why the Pilgrims didn't do more with the fertile land in which the colony was situated—puzzling, that is, until we realize that they brought with them no horses, cows, plows, or carts. They were equipped with only one kind of hook and net, too large for small fish. While they had both powder and guns, they knew little about their use and were slow to learn.

Help from Fishermen

Frequently, however, a helping hand was stretched out to aid them. While the Pilgrims were desperately in need of food in 1622, Edward Winslow journeyed to Maine, hoping to find supplies. There, among fishermen who had been on the Maine coast for more than a century—men from Devonshire, Holland, the Basque country, and Brittany

—he received "entertainment and good respect with a willingness to supply all wants."

A friendly Indian named Samoset paid the colony a visit after that first terrible winter and startled the remnants of the band by saying, "Much welcome, Englishmen." (He had learned English from fishermen off Monhegan Island.)

Soon after came Chief Massasoit, whose hand might easily have annihilated the feeble settlers, and he also offered hospitality. And Squanto, who had learned English when he was carried off to England as a prize by early voyagers, taught the Pilgrims how to plant Indian corn.

Craftsmen in Colony

The problems faced by the Pilgrims were alien to the Puritans couldn't stop. They 10 years later. They weren't poor. Instead of the "mixed lot" that arrived in the Mayflower, the colony of Massachusetts Bay contained many skilled craftsmen.

At first they built homes that were little more than bark covered wigwams, dugouts with sod roofs, and thatched roof cottages. By 1640 they began buildings patterned after the familiar—the medieval wooden manor houses with steep roofs and leaded casement windows. This style began to change into something better suited to severe winters, Indian raids, and different kinds of building materials. The basic pattern, however, remained, seen today in Salem's House of the Seven Gables.

Instead of the trickle of colonists that came to Plymouth, Massachusetts Bay was deluged. There were 10,000 settlers by 1640—and still the stream of immigration flowed on, bringing shipbuilders, merchants, indentured servants, artisans, shopkeepers. The colony couldn't contain them.

A Hunger for Land

Where the Pilgrims had no desire to push out beyond their original community, the Puritans couldn't stop. They moved in groups, settling whole communities, possessed of an insatiable land hunger which endured as long as land was to be had for the going.

Not only lack of desire to expand their territory, but the whole contract under which they sailed from England had hampered the Pilgrims. Their experiment in communism failed. Bound to work for their backers, the Merchant Adventurers, for seven years, the Pilgrims had little incentive when the profits went to the parent company. It was not until 1623, when the policy of giving land to families was instituted, making them responsible for their own sustenance and allowing them to keep a profit, that a marked increase in labor was noted.

Poor, honest, and unworldly, the Pilgrims wanted only to live their own lives in their own way. When they signed the Mayflower Compact, they set up a completely democratic government, with no class or wealth distinctions, a government morally responsible for promoting "ye general good of ye Colonie."

Puritan View Differs

Not so the Puritans. Their elders, bound up in their determination that man's spiritual and communal lives were inseparable, found it natural to insist on a ruling elite of those who could interpret the true path for the followers. There could be no tolerance.

In fact, one Puritan divine stated in a sermon: "The Satan's policy to plead for an indefinite and boundless toleration." And as for democracy, John Winthrop pronounced it "the meanest and worst of all forms of government."

This was the conscience which, at the height of its intensity, allowed a few fanatics to feed the flames of witchcraft on Gallows Hill and press Giles Corey to a slow death between heavy weights for supposed transgressions; it was the conscience that sent an ailing Roger Williams into a January snowstorm, banished forever from the Bay colony for challenging Puritan orthodoxy.

Uproar by Revolution

The American Revolution finally broke the power of the Puritan dynasty. During and after the war, special privileges of all kinds came under attack, and people turned naturally to religions which were based on men's equality, rather than one dominated by a few specially selected individuals.

The visitor's first contact with Plymouth Rock is likely to be a disappointing one. He will find it smaller than he imagined, with a crack running thru it. The bars around it, the overshadowing monument, and the possible doubt that this is actually where the Pilgrims came ashore take something away from its reality.

Rock Still Is Symbol

But from the rock at Plymouth there emanated ripples of great importance for the history of America. From his stay in Plymouth, Roger Williams undoubtedly derived ideas on popular government, which he passed on to Thomas Hooker of Hartford. When the first Puritans were ravaged by disease, they sought medical assistance from Samuel Fuller of the Mayflower.

Reality there is—the reality that they landed and stayed. The rock remains a symbol that the colonization of New England was possible, if only one had faith and endurance.

[Indians may have said "Skoal" When the Mayflower Arrived

BY MICHAEL KILIAN

Viking explorers should be credited with something more than the mere discovery of America, a visiting Scandinavian historian said yesterday.

The Vikings apparently also discovered Oklahoma and stayed to become Indians, said Dr. Ole Godfred Landsverk, who has stopped here while en route to Nordic archaeological diggings in Newfoundland.

Dr. Landsverk said in an interview that he has indisputable proof that Vikings were on this continent as early as 1009, not only in Newfoundland, but in Massachusetts, Ohio, Minnesota, and Oklahoma.

Cites Nordic Markers

The proof consists of 10 "runestones," historical markers left by the Norsemen to show where they had been.

Inscribed with markings including dates and other historical data, at least three of the rune stones show the name of Henrikus, first bishop of Greenland, who visited Vinland in 1099, Dr. Landsverk said.

The stones show that the Vikings not only beat Christopher Columbus to the continent but thoroly [sic] explored it; sailing around the Gulf of Mexico and up the Mississippi River, he said.

Vikings Went Native

<sup>33</sup> Image from Chicago Tribune from "Indians May Have Said 'Skoal' When the Mayflower Arrived," database with images, Newspapers.com (<https://www.newspapers.com> : accessed 16 September 2020), from Chicago Tribune, 9 July 1969, page 52.

They went Columbus one better, he said. The Italian brought western civilization to America, which led to traffic jams, smog, and income taxes. The Vikings instead went native, joining Indian tribes.

Dr. Landsverk said there are many blond-haired, blue-eyed persons in Canada today registered as full-blooded Iroquois Indians. The Algonquin Indian language contains many medieval Norse words, he said.

According to Dr. Landsverk, it is quite possible that the Indians who greeted the Mayflower did not say "How." They may very well have said, "Skoal."]

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Leif Erickson will have his day Oct. 9 through a proclamation signed by President Nixon.

Nixon scheduled the day in honor of the Norse explorer Tuesday but carefully avoided taking a stand in the dispute over whether Erickson or Christopher Columbus discovered America.

Robert Bartlett was born between 1603 – 1606 in England. He descended from Adams Barthholet of Brian 1066.

Mr Bartlett came from England in 1623 on the steamship “Ann.” He had been a fellow passenger of Mrs Richard (Elizabeth) Warren and her five daughters. They landed in Plymouth, Massachusetts.

Mr Bartlett was one of the first purchasers of land at Dartmouth, Massachusetts. He served in Captain Miles Standish Company in 1632. He became a free man in 1633.

Mr Robert Bartlett married after May 22, 1627 to Mary Warren, a daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Warren. Mary was born about 1610 in England. Eight children were born to them in Plymouth, Massachusetts.

Mr Bartlett died between September 19 and October 29, 1676 in Plymouth. His will was proved October 29, 1676. The inventory of his estate totaled 390 pounds.

After Mr Bartletts [sic] death Mary married Thomas Delano. She died March 27, 1683 in Plymouth.

Warren

Christopher A. Warren of Scrooby England, 15th generation from Isabel, Countess of De Vermandois who married William the 2nd, Earl of Warren, and through this marriage every known European line from the earliest history is united. Isabel was the daughter of Hugh the Great who married Adela, 11th generation from Charlemagne. Christopher's son, Richard, came to America on the Mayflower. Data in the Newberry Library, Chicago, by Mrs W. A. Roebling of Mass. gives this line back to the Roman Norman Lines 12 generations, the Saxon line to William the Conqueror, Fladers [sic] Line and Charlemagne Italian – A very complicated chart.

Richard Warren was not of the Leydon Holland Company but joined the company when they started for America. He was a man of influence and had been a merchant in London and had considerable wealth. He was in the "First Encounter." He married a widow but she did not come to America until 1623 in the "Ann" with their five daughters. Two sons were born to them after their arrival.
